

Kevin Kwok-yin Cheng is an Assistant Professor and Assistant Dean (Research) at the Faculty of Law, The Chinese University of Hong Kong. His research interests revolve around empirically investigating various aspects of criminal procedure, such as plea decisions and cracked trials, as well as public attitudes toward different legal authorities and criminal justice polices. His has published in the British Journal of Criminology, Social & Legal Studies, Law & Social Inquiry, and New Criminal Law Review. His current project on cracked trials is supported by a grant awarded by the Research Grants Council of the Hong Kong Special Administrative Region.